

Sample design:

Two stage sample design was adopted following assumption to get reliable estimate and achieve the objectives. The main objectives are to find actual vital and migration registration numbers among total events occurred in the society. In addition to know the trend of vital registration system in last three years.

Sample Frame:

Sample frame of CRVS survey was constructed from National Population census 2011. This frame has aggregated ward wise information about House Number, Household Number, and male, female and total population. However the provided frame was based on 2011 administrative boundaries which were reconstructed into new existing administrative boundaries having 217 municipalities. Here basically wards are our enumeration area (EA).

Target population:

There are often several target populations in household surveys. In CRVS survey, the following events occurred in last three years were our target population.

- (1) Children less than three years,
- (2) Households having death,
- (3) Married couple,
- (4) Divorce persons,
- (5) In & out migrated household and
- (6) Adoption of Children.

Sample size depends also on the target population so that the calculation of the sample size must therefore take into consideration each of the target populations. The resulting sample size was considerably larger than that needed for a target group comprised of all persons or all households.

Domains:

Major significant factor that has a large impact on the sample size is the number of domains. Domains are generally defined as the analytical sub-groups for which equally reliable data are wanted. Domains of study were 15 ecological development areas and Kathmandu valley altogether 16 domains.

Poilot survey:

Before determining the sample size, some of required parameter should be known and updated. In order to achive above objective, a pilot survey was conducted in Tapalejung, Sunsari, Sindhuli, Kaski, Kailali and Bajhang district, which represents two districts in each ecological belt (Mountain, Hill and Tarai). 900 households were intervied in urban areas whereas 1000 households were intervied in rural areas for investigation of vital events occur and their registration period.

Sample size calculation:

The calculation formula for determining the sample size, taking into account of the previously-discussed parameters. Because we are focusing on household surveys the sample size is calculated in terms of the number of households that must be selected. The estimation formula for the sample size, n_h , was

$$n_h = \frac{(Z_{\alpha/2}^2)(r)(1-r)(f)(k)}{(p)(H_z)(e^2)}$$

Where,

n_h is the parameter to be calculated and is the sample size in terms of number of households to be selected;

z is the statistic that defines the level of confidence desired;

r is an estimate of a key indicator to be measured by the survey;

f is the sample design effect, deff, assumed to be 2.0 (default value);

k is a multiplier to account for the anticipated rate of non-response;

p is the proportion of the total population accounted for by the target population and upon which the parameter, r , is based;

H_z is the average household size (number of persons per household);

e is the margin of error to be attained.

After using adjustment of finite population correction factor, final sample size of domains was 80000 households.

Sample selection and Sample allocation:

In the first stage, probability proportional to size (PPS) sampling scheme was adopted to select the enumeration area (EA) and required number of households was enumerated from selected EAs in final stage.

Enumeration areas (EAs) were defined as wards or, in cases where wards contained less than 50 households, combinations of wards. In cases of very large wards, smaller segments were prepared for making sizable EAs. For such wards, the block maps prepared during the 2011 population census were used.

First of all, the urban and rural EAs were arranged according to their respective domain with household number. The selection of EAs were done by using probability proportional to size sampling scheme number of household as measure of size. In urban area 673 EAs and rural 927 EAs, altogether 1600 EAs were selected from 75 districts to further investigation.

In each selected EA, 50 households were listed starting from north east corner of EA. If listed household having any vital and migration events in last three years then main questionnaire will be asked to that particular households. Selected enumeration areas are given in Annex 1.

Estimation:

The parameters of variables were estimated at ecological development region first, and national estimates were obtained by aggregating across all 15 ecological development region and Kathmandu Valley.

Estimation for Ecological Development Region:

Estimate of the average value of characteristic X per event such as birth, death, marriage, migration and adoption of child registered in EA i and ecological development region h is given by,

$$\bar{x}_{hi} = \frac{\sum_{j=1}^{m_{hi}} x_{hij}}{m_{hi}}$$ m_{hi} = number of sample event occurred in EA i and ecological development region h .

Where,

X_{hij} = value of characteristic X for event registered j in EA i and ecological development region h .

The estimate of average characteristic X in ecological development region h is given by,

$$\bar{x}_h = \frac{\sum_{i=1}^w \bar{x}_{hi}}{m_h}$$

Where, m_h = Total number of selected EAs in ecological development region h .

Estimation for National level :

The average value of characteristic X per event is given by:

Where, X_h = Total number of events registered in ecological development region h .

M_h = Total number of occurred in ecological development region h .
